

Person-Centered Care...

It's WHY we do WHAT we do at Logan County Senior Living!

In a traditional long-term care setting, elders are expected to fit in with the routines and practices that staff feel are most appropriate. Conversely, in a setting focused on providing person-centered care, services change to be more flexible to meet each elder's needs in a manner that is best for them.

How is person-centered care different?

- Getting to know the elder as a person and recognizing their individuality
- Seeing the elder as an expert about their own health and care
- Sharing power and responsibility
- Taking a holistic approach to assessing each elder's needs and providing care
- Including families where appropriate
- Services are accessible, flexible and easy to adapt with changes
- Promotion, coordination and continuity of care through constant communication
- The physical, cultural and psychosocial environment supports person-centered care for a more homelike environment
- Ensuring staff are supportive, well trained in communication and striving to put the elder at the center of their care

Person-centered care is a philosophy that changes the focus of caregiving from accomplishing tasks to fulfilling the needs of the elder. As a result, the personal preferences of elders become as important as providing the services and supports they need. Traditionally, high quality clinical care is seen as the pinnacle focus of a long-term care provider. With person-centered care, high quality clinical care remains critically important, but quality of life is valued as equally important.

At Logan County Senior Living, we do both.....WELL!

Benefits of personcentered care:

- Elders and families have enhanced satisfaction and overall improved experience
- Elders lead a more purposeful life
- Elders and families are empowered and more in control
- Positive impact on elder's overall health outcomes (fewer hospitalizations, declines, and faster healing)
- Staff feel confident and satisfied about the care they provide which creates a more positive work environment
